

Call for Papers

3rd Annual Student Conference on Arts, Humanities and Social Sciences

Conference Theme:

Young Voices on Global Challenges: Movements, Shifts, Opportunities, and Risks

11-12 June 2016

Zaman University, Phnom Penh/CAMBODIA

Recognizing the significant need for original research and development initiatives in Cambodia and to promote research culture among university students both in Cambodia and in the region, Zaman University has been organizing and hosting Annual Student Conferences since 2014. The panels generated rigorous discussion on various subjects and attracted attention from the media and academia. This year, the 3rd Annual Student Conference will continue serving the purpose of proving a platform for students to share their knowledge and research activities by presenting them to the public. Distinguished intellectuals and professionals will be serving as chairs and discussants of the panels and will provide feedback on the research papers presented.

Academic conference aims to encourage original research

Cambodia

Conference Offers Grad Students a Chance To Present Their Work

Print Share

2nd Annual Student Conference on Arts, Humanities and Social Sciences held at Zaman University, in Phnom Penh on May 23rd 2015. This student conference aims to encourage students to do more research in their studies. (Nov Povleakhena/VOA Khmer)

Nov Povleakhena, VOA Khmer
29 May 2015

PHNOM PENH—An annual student conference that aims to encourage students to do more research in

The theme of this year's conference focuses on opportunities for the youth and their engagement in tackling global issues. Our world is changing and while every day brings in new opportunities, multiple challenges emerge as well. National and global social movements are changing the landscape of politics and international relations. While the social media is connecting the world, traditional loyalties are shifting and are being remade. Global connectivity is bringing about new waves of thought and novel ways of action. Start-ups and social entrepreneurship are reshaping the global economic activities and creating multiple benefits all the while challenging the existing structures. Young people are both at the center of these changes and are the biggest group to be affected by them. This conference aims to provide them with an arena where they can voice their concerns and share the solutions they come up with through their research.

By participating in the conference, students will:

- get valuable feedback on the progress of their research
- have a unique chance to expand their professional network
- receive a Certificate of Participation
- have an opportunity to get their paper published in conference proceedings
- be immersed in the rich social and cultural atmosphere of Cambodia (for international participants)

Students are encouraged to submit their abstracts (1-2 paragraph summary of the research proposed to be presented in the conference) in the following disciplines:

Political Science and International Relations

Banking and Finance

Business Administration and Entrepreneurship

Development Studies

Domestic and International Law

Environmental Sciences, Natural Resources, and Energy Politics

Media and Communications

Education

Art, History, and Architecture

Important Dates:

Abstracts Submission Deadline:	April 17, 2016
Notification of the accepted abstracts:	April 25, 2016
Pre-conference workshop (Participation is optional):	May 16, 2016

Abstract Submission

While the conference is open to all students, Senior Undergraduates, and Master's Students are particularly encouraged to apply.

Interested students are required to submit their abstract no later than April 17, 2016. The Abstract must include a tentative title, institutional affiliation of the student, contact information, and should be approximately 250 words.

Participants from outside Cambodia will be provided with room and board for the conference duration. A small contribution may be provided for the airfare depending on the available funding for the conference program.

For abstract submission or further inquiries, please contact:

Sc-feas@zamanuniversity.edu.kh

Important Notice

There is no registration fee. Please follow the conference social media page to get updates.

<https://www.facebook.com/annualstudentconf>

